Mock Interview Training Programme

Introduction:

In the ever-evolving world of education, it is imperative for institutions to provide students with comprehensive training that extends beyond theoretical knowledge. The PG Department of Commerce at PES Institute of Advanced Management Studies (PESIAMS), in collaboration with the Career Development Centre (CDC) of PES Trust®, recognized the need to equip M.Com students with practical skills essential for their professional journey. To address this, a Mock Interview Training Programme was organized on September 01, 2023. The training aimed to bridge the gap between academic excellence and real-world application by simulating interview scenarios and providing expert guidance. The resource persons for the event were Dr. Prasanna Kumar T.M, Head of CDC, Mr. Maltesh Deshpande, Assistant Manager of CDC, and Miss. Pooja, Assistant Manager of CDC.

Objective:

The primary objective of the Mock Interview Training Programme was to equip M.Com students with the necessary skills, knowledge, and confidence to excel in job interviews. The program aimed to bridge the gap between academic learning and industry requirements by offering students a platform to experience simulated interview scenarios. By participating in mock interviews, students could identify their strengths and areas for improvement, ultimately enhancing their employability prospects.

Program Outcome:

The Mock Interview Training Program had several significant outcomes for the participating M.Com students. Firstly, it helped them develop a deeper understanding of the interview process, including various stages, types of questions, and evaluation criteria. The resource persons shared insights into industry expectations and the importance of effective communication, body language, and presentation skills during interviews.

Furthermore, the program enabled students to identify their strengths and weaknesses in a controlled environment. Each mock interview session was followed by personalized feedback from the resource persons, which allowed students to recognize areas for improvement and work on refining their responses. By offering exposure to diverse interview scenarios, the program contributed to enhancing students' confidence and adaptability. The practical nature of the training facilitated experiential learning, ensuring that students could practice and internalize the feedback received. As a result, participants gained a competitive edge in the job market by becoming better equipped to showcase their skills and qualifications during interviews.

Feedback by Students:

The feedback from students who participated in the Mock Interview Training Program was overwhelmingly positive. Many students expressed their gratitude for the opportunity to engage in realistic interview simulations and receive valuable feedback from experienced professionals. They highlighted the insights gained into their strengths and areas needing improvement, which they believed would greatly benefit them in actual job interviews.

Students also appreciated the resource persons' expertise and their ability to create a supportive and encouraging environment. The constructive criticism provided during the feedback sessions was viewed as instrumental in helping them refine their communication skills, body language, and overall interview performance.

Conclusion:

The Mock Interview Training Program conducted by the PG Department of Commerce at PESIAMS, in collaboration with the Career Development Centre of PES Trust®, proved to be a resounding success. The program achieved its objective of enhancing the interview skills and employability of M.Com students. By providing a platform for students to practice, receive feedback, and learn from experienced professionals, the program contributed to their overall growth and readiness for the job market. This initiative exemplified the commitment of educational institutions to empower students beyond academic knowledge. The program's impact will likely extend beyond the classroom, as the participants carry their refined interview skills into their professional journeys. Such endeavors reinforce the importance of practical skill development in conjunction with theoretical education, ensuring that graduates are well-prepared to navigate the challenges of the modern workforce.
